OLD JOURNAL INTERFACE // ARTICLES

The screenshot shows the 'Articles' page of the European Journal of Policing Studies. At the top, there is a search bar and navigation tabs for Home, Search, Articles, Information, Subscriptions, and Help. A sidebar on the left contains a year filter (2012-2024) and issue options (Issue Online First, Issue 3, Issue 1-2). The main content area lists three articles from the 'Issue Online First, 2024' section. Each article entry includes the title, authors, and options to view the abstract or author information. A 'Most popular articles of the past' section is visible at the bottom right of the article list.

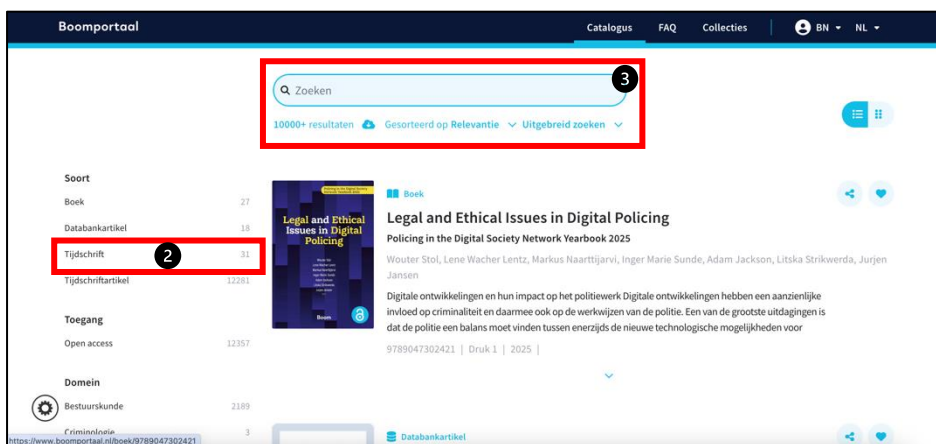

This screenshot shows a full article page. The article title is "Free Text Is Essentially the Enemy of What We're Trying to Achieve": The Framing of a National Vision for Delivering Digital Police Contact. The authors listed are Helen Wells, Will Andrews, Estelle Clayton, Ben Bradford, Elizabeth V. Aston, and Megan O'Neill. The DOI is 10.5553/EJPS.000017. The page includes a 'Contents' section with the following items: 1 Introduction, 2 Technology in Policing, 3 Framing Police-Public Interaction, 4 Methodology, 5 Findings, 6 Conclusion, and References. There is also a 'Back to top' link. The article text begins with the introduction: "When the public make contact with the police to report an incident, that encounter is increasingly likely to include some form of technological mediation, whether through online reporting systems, such as the Single Online Home (SOH) (a centrally designed 'shop front' intended to give UK policing a consistent online brand), Live Chat (either with a human or 'chat bot'), Digital 101 (an online non-emergency reporting mechanism), or online reporting via social media. Each of these developments offers an alternative to traditional phone contact using the established emergency
